For example, the coconut sector.
So, what could be the conclusion? All major systems need to be deeply restructured. We should encourage even families and communities to change their life strategies. It has to be realized whether we like it or not: the illusion of a society based on entitlements and unaffordable social expenditures is over. All right, this sounds brutal. And this leads to the essential question: will the European political elite be brave enough to be honest and to tell the people about this? And here we have arrived at the necessity of traditional values, because we could consider honesty as a traditional value. Without honesty not only are we going to be unable to overcome the crisis, but we will hardly be in a position to raise the adequate questions either. All in all, long live honesty.
Brothers and sisters, if the road before us is still long, and the challenges are still getting bigger, our collective will should be bigger and our determination should be stronger, Insha‘Allah, we will manage to realize our goals and aspirations for the good and welfare of our peoples.

Ladies and gentlemen, I don’t ever want to leave this house. I am convinced that there is no better place for us to live than in our shared European home! We are now in the process of fitting it out. We are extending it. We are renovating parts of it. Sometimes I think we are so busy extending and renovating the building to allow almost half a billion Europeans to make their home there, that we could easily overlook its greatness and uniqueness in the midst of all the construction work. Then we are A dynamic mass-based drive for increasing livestock production should be waged. Collective livestock farming at cooperative farms and private livestock farming at rural households should be developed. These types of livestock farming hold no small share in the country’s livestock production. To develop these types of livestock farming is a major way for increasing livestock production without large investment from the state. All cooperative farms should build up their stockbreeding workteams and animal-fattening subworkteams and ensure profitability of their operation. It is important to give them assignments for the production of the young and meat and make them fulfil these assignments without fail. Private livestock farming at rural households should be encouraged. Every house teeming with domestic animals adds to the socialist rural scenery. Rural households should be encouraged to raise large numbers of pigs, goats, rabbits, chicken and other kinds of domestic animals so as to augment their income and enrich their lives. Livestock farming should be undertaken at all units.

Of course, it goes without saying that justice cannot be administered in the absence of spirituality and rationality. I have stressed this point in the past as well. In the absence of spirituality, justice turns into hypocrisy. In addition, rationality is a necessity for the administration of justice, because in the absence of rationality genuine justice may be replaced with what is only so-called justice. Therefore, rationality and spirituality are both a prerequisite for the administration of justice. Progress would lose its meaning in the absence of justice, as would justice in the absence of progress. Justice and progress must go hand in hand. If we are to turn into a model for other Islamic countries, the promotion of justice and progress must be our lofty aspiration and it must be of central concern. The twenty-year strategic plan would provide us with the necessary direction. The strategic plan must not be disregarded.

Brothers and Sisters! I have intentionally avoided going into details of the problems we are facing today. I will take the nation into confidence soon and present the salient features of the promising future which I foresee. Today, I want to tell you that... despite some difficulties, we are hopeful for a better and prosperous future. The leadership is united. We have enough to build our country and Insha’Allah we will come out of the difficult situation as we have the necessary wherewithal for the new journey. God be our saviour and guide!

Let me say in this respect that I will also not let you down and will speak directly and frankly. Some of what I say might seem a bit too harsh, but if we do not speak directly and honestly about what we really think, then there is little point in even meeting in this way. It would be better in that case just to keep to diplomatic get-togethers, where no one says anything of real sense and, recalling the words of one famous diplomat, you realise that diplomats have tongues so as not to speak the truth. We get together for other reasons. We get together so as to talk frankly with each other. We need to be direct and blunt today not so as to trade barbs, but so as to attempt to get to the bottom of what is actually happening in the world, try to understand why the world is becoming less safe and more unpredictable, and why the risks are increasing everywhere around us. Today’s discussion took place under the theme: New Rules or a Game without Rules. I think that this formula accurately describes the historic turning point we have reached today and the choice we all face.

We shall go on to the end, we shall fight in France, we shall fight on the seas and oceans, we shall fight with growing confidence and growing strength in the air, we shall defend our Island, whatever the cost may be, we shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender, and even if, which I do not for a moment believe, this Island or a large part of it were subjugated and starving, then our Empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British Fleet, would carry on the struggle, until, in God’s good time, the New World, with all its power and might, steps forth to the rescue and the liberation of the old.

For example, the coconut sector. According to research conducted in 2009, coconut farmers make up one of the poorest sectors in the country. Let us look at the process of growing coconuts: Once planted, farmers wait seven years for the coconut tree to bear fruit; but after this, two generations will be able to benefit without doing anything else apart from harvesting the fruit. We have the potential to vastly increase the income of this sector if we can foster a culture that truly encourages hard work and productivity."

"We need to plant ideological trees all over the world. Against the attempts to uproot ideologies and love, we need to refill the world with love, with new and old ideas. The desert is also related to this. A desert of values, a desert of love, a desert of principles. These deserts are more dangerous than the geographical ones."

"And we have a great opportunity during this time of war to lead the world toward the values that will bring lasting peace. All fathers and mothers, in all societies, want their children to be educated and live free from poverty and violence. No people on Earth yearn to be oppressed or aspire to servitude or eagerly await the midnight knock of the secret police. If anyone doubts this, let them look to Afghanistan, where the Islamic ‘street’ greeted the fall of tyranny with song and celebration. Let the skeptics look to Islam’s own rich history, with its centuries of learning and tolerance and progress. America will lead by defending liberty and justice because they are right and true and unchanging for all people everywhere."

The situation in the world today is complex and dangerous, though not unalterable. Everything depends on the united and resolute actions of those who sincerely want peace. The Soviet Union and the other countries of the socialist community have time and again proved their roles as the strongest and most influential bulwark in this struggle. People in this country are well aware of the fact that the best way to serve the safeguarding of peace is to further strengthen the GDR in every possible way, thus contributing to the consolidation of socialism’s international positions. This attitude has typified the run-up period towards the GDR’s 35th anniversary and will be the guiding motive of future efforts. The peoples of the world can always count on the first socialist workers’ and farmers’ state on German soil in the struggle for secure peace, for the strengthening of socialism, for progress and a happy life."

I have applied much self-discipline during the past weeks and months. I have been lenient and patient. Don’t push us too far in your own interests,
I tell them. Reform through a process of negotiation is not weakness. Talking, consulting, bargaining with all our peoples’ leaders is not weakness. Mutual acceptance of and joint responsibility for the welfare and stability of our country is not weakness. It is our strength. Our strength is the courage to face and accommodate the problems bequeathed to us by history. The reality of our diversity is a hard reality. We face it, because it is there. How do we accommodate it? How do we build a better future out of cultures, values, languages which are demonstrably real in our heterogeneous society? We are resolved, we are committed, to do so in two fundamental ways. Firstly – by letting the people speak. By letting the people speak through their leaders.”

tutti (it.), literally meaning ‘all’ or ‘together’. Used as a musical term, for the whole orchestra as opposed to the soloist. Applied similarly to choral music, where the whole section or choir is called to sing.
